

What did you make of the symposium?

→ Definitely the symposium is thought provoking

→ Thanked to the organisers... building in schools to happen only

→ Day 2 - 1st session was easy to connect to from the public education perspective but would have talked more about how MGML practices can be helpful/appropriate.

→ 2nd and 3rd sessions were interesting in terms of educational ideas but I felt the link to MGML was a little tenuous.

→ Day 1 MGML, mixed age group sessions were thought provoking. Give a space to children, learn & release. — Anam. Kolliba-V

Dear Organizers,
This symposium was enriching as well as thought provoking when the advantages, problems and challenges related to MGML were discussed. Loved the way the programme was conducted, the opportunity to discuss inside and outside the hall and the quality of speakers was really satisfying.

This symposium can be carried forward where additions and modifications can be taken up. The best part were the people coming from different backgrounds who brought in rich perspectives. Hoping to be a part of other similar programs and that the department takes up programs in other educational areas too.

Thankyou.

An excellent workshop for two days on MGML organised by Dr. Milind Brahme.

Mr. Dr. Milind has done a wonderful job of inviting experts in this job. Sessions by Y. Yastime & Citka were wonderful and all sessions gave an opportunity to learn on MGML & collaborative learning

I had such a great experience in these two days, lectures from such experienced person were very helpful to understand the need of the students in today's time.

I think we got the opportunity to make the some changes in our classroom for the benefit of the students.

It was a great experience. We learnt a lot of new things. MGML & cooperative learning are very inspiring. We would like to implement in our class room. Participating in the activities, we cleared many of our doubts and inhibitions of taking <sup>them</sup> to our classroom. Thanks a lot!
Would write about our experiences.

THANK YOU SO MUCH FOR ORGANIZING!

I loved all the sessions on Day 1.

On Day 2, it felt like we deviated a little from pedagogy and maybe focused too much on questions of climate change or the nation-state. The final activity could've been a day-long workshop for those interested as some self-identified members the "elderly" admitted to not relishing it. A round of introduction at the beginning might've made the international community mingle better with the Indians. Non-UTians appeared to walk on eggshells & keep to themselves on day 1. Some attendees rambled on a ton and couldn't articulate their questions clearly. Typing questions/observations on a shared google form speakers responded to, will greatly help with the time deficit. I found the activity & most sessions exciting & the speaker inspiring & the organizing team very friendly.

An excellent opportunity for people to come together and understand the development in educational research happening at everywhere around the globe. I found the symposium highly informative, not tied up in constraints of politics where the statements are not honest. I found the entire event quite refreshing and am leaving with more questions to ponder upon.

From this symposium, I could not only learn more about MGML, but also could understand different perspectives of education.

Thank you for organizing this symposium, and giving me such opportunity to learn and connect with people.

Danke für die sehr inspirierenden
2 Tage, die grandiose Organisation und die Diskussionsrunden, die ermöglicht
wird. ☺ C.F. —

Danke für ein ausgezeichnetes Symposium.
Die Themen legen teilweise etwas ausein-ander (MGL vs. GCEQ); jedoch: sehr gute Diskussion mit Tiefgang auf einem angemessenen Niveau. Ich nehme Anregenungen mit, wie GCEQ Kontakt mit MGL verbunden werden könnte und seine Anknüpfungspunkte zu Non-Violent Communication.

Although I did not plan to attend the symposium initially, ~~at~~ the my experience of the symposium clearly tells me that I should have planned more carefully, particularly to attend the workshop, which I unfortunately missed out. I enjoyed the conversations with Gregor and the "unstructured" dialogue ~~between~~ among practitioners students, and scholars
in the field of education.
